His Fight For the Democratic Nomination Started.

ENDORSED BY TWO CONVENTIONS.

The Massachusetts and Rhode Island Democrats Enthusiastically Declare For the Ex-Governor-The Massachusetts Democrats Condemn the A. P. A.

Boston, April 22.-With enthusiasm almost surpassing that noted at the recent state convention of the Republicans of Massachusetts, when Thomas B. Reed was endorsed as a presidential candidate, the Democrats of this state in their convention set their approval upon Grover Cleveland as president and named ex-Governor William E. Russell as their choice for the nomination to be President Cleveland's succes-Judge John W. Corocran called the convention to order. The usual honorary officers were chosen. Hon. Thomas J. Gargan of Boston was named as chairman of the committee on resolutions and Hon. John E. Thayer of Worcester was chosen permanent chairman.

During the delivery of Mr. Thayer's address the applause was loud and enthusiastic, especially upon the severe criticism of the American Protective association and at the mention of President Cleveland's name. The election of four delegates-at-large was then moved, and the names of Hon. Russel of Leicester, George Fred Williams of Dedham, John W. Corcoran of Clinton and James W.

In conclusion the platform declares that while the delegates are not pledged that it is the wish of Massachusetts Democrats to present and recommedd as their candidate for president ex-Governor William Eustace Russell. A wild demonstration followed over the endorsement of Russell.

RHODE ISLAND FOR RUSSELL.

The Democratic State Convention De clares For Him For President.

PROVIDENCE, April 22.—The Demo cratic state convention selected the following delegates to Chicago: Hon. Richard B. Coster, Providence: Hon. George W. Greene, Woonsocket; Miles A. McNamee and Jesse H. Metcalfe, Providence; Hon. James J. Van Alen, Newport; John H. Tucker, Warwick; Hon. David S. Baker, North Kingston, and John E. Conley of Warren.

Chairman Comstock, in his opening remarks, paid a high compliment to William E. Russell, alluding at length to his ability as an executive. His reference to Mr. Russell were received with great applause, especially when he asserted Mr. Russell would, as presidential candidate, again lead his party to victory. The platform approves President Cleveland's administration, declares for sound money, opposes free silver unless under agreement with "at least four of the great powers of the western world," endorses the Monroe doctrine and the Wilson tariff bill and condemns reciprocity. Then the platform says: "As nobly representing these principles we commend to the delegates and the Chicago convention, one who will make an ideal president, William E. Russell of Massachusetts.

The mention of ex-Governor Russell's name called forth the demonstration of the day. The endorsement of his candidacy was most hearty.

hundred Democrats here to attend the Democratic state convention were horrified at a tragedy at the depot. The platform was crowded when Bob Kennedy, sheriff of Dallas county, Ala , stepped out with a double-barreled shotgun and opened fire upon two brothers, Percy and Mardis Wood, both citizens of Selma, fatally wounding the former. Mardis Wood drew his pisto! and fired at Kennedy five times without latting him. Kennedy reloaded his gun twice, firing in all six shots at Mardis Wood, shattering his right shoulder and breaking his left arm. The trouble grew out of relations said to exist between Mardis Wood and the wife of Kennedy, all the parties being residents of Selma, Ala. Mardis Wood came here to attend the meeting of the Democratic state executive committee, of which he is a member. He has been for 20 years a prominent figure in polities, and two years ago was the nom-nee of the Democratic party in the Fourth district for congress, but withdrew before the election, and Gaston Robbins, recently unseated, took his place. Kennedy is in jail here.

Temporary Structure For the Republican Convention.

IT WILL HOLD 15,000 PEOPLE.

Why the Convention Will Cost the City $30,000 More Than Was Expected-The Temporary Structure and How to Get to It-A Grand Meeting Place.

[Special Correspondence.]

St. Louis, April 14.—The people of St. Louis bit off not more than they could chew, but a great deal more than they expected to masticate, when they undertook the entertainment of the Republican national convention. The entertainment will cost them at least $20,-000 more than they expected, and they are asking themselves whether it pays to get a national convention after all.

tion down Clark avenue which goes right past it. The building will be one of the largest ever constructed for a convention. It will cover 46,800 square feet of ground. Its front will be 260 feet and its depth 180 feet. The architect estimates the material needed as 1,500,000 feet of lumber and 500 kegs of nails. The timbers used will be unusually heavy and will guarantee perfect safety. There which will take you to the auditorium, and there is a line from the Union stain the amount needed to put up a temporary structure—a "wigwam" — for the convention hall. In the original plans for the entertainment of the Republicans the north nave of the Exposition building was to be converted into 8,000 people. It was used by the Democratic convention of 1888 and was one of the most heartily condemned of all convention places. It shone only by comparison with the Chicago wigwam of 1892, whose roof leaked, and whose walls were extraordinary absorbents of heat.

Room For Spectators. In 1888 the platform of the presiding officer was placed at the east end of the long, narrow nave of the Exposition building. A few of the people in the hall saw the presiding officer, some of them heard him, but even to the delegates the conditions were almost hopelessly poor. This time it was proposed to put the presiding officer on the north side of the nave, but while this would have made the arrangements perfectly satisfactory for the delegates it would have given little opportunity for the spectators. In spite of the warning at | of floor space. Minneapolis four years ago, when delegates were subordinated one-half of the time to a horde of people in the ga leries, the committee appointed by the Republican national committee decided to cater to the comfort of the spectators even more elaborately than was done $30,000 to put the Expesition building in order, the citizens will spend $50,-900 to erect a temporary structure. The entire amount needed for the entertainment of the delegates is yet to be subscribed, but certain wealthy business men have guaranteed the sum, so there is no doubt that it will be ready when it is needed. President Thompson of the Bank of Commerce is the custodian of the guarantee fund, and he could pay the entire expense of the convention out of his own pocket if he felt disposed.

The temporary convention hall is to be erected on the block on which stands the uncompleted city hall—a monument to municipal mismanagement. This block of ground is of the size of two city blocks and a little more than onehalf of it is vacant. Originally it was a public park, and when the city undertook to use it as a site for the city hall the heirs of the man who presented it to the city for park purposes made a claim of money. The city conneil has granted permission for the use of the vacant utes' time. The total seman, capacity will be 15,000.

The Interior Arrangements.

Along the four sides of the ground floor of the building the seats will rise: in tiers from an oblong space in the a convention hall. It would hold about center. In the oblong inclosure, which will not be broken by posts, the delegates, the alternates, the presiding officer, the newspaper and telegraph representatives and the members of the national committee will be. The delegates will occupy rows of seats in three sections. These will be directly under the skylight, facing north. Opposite the middle section of delegates' seats will be the platform of the presiding officer. Behind it will be the seats for the members of the national committee, and behind these seats for distinguished guests.

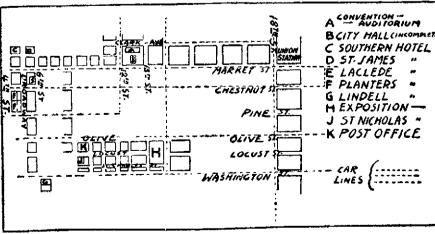

To right and left of the presiding officer will be the press seats, 450 in number. The delegates' seats will be 924 in all. To right and left of the delegates will be the alternates, 462 on each ' side, and their seats will be arranged in six sections, facing the space occupied by the delegates. The delegates and alternates will occupy 18,000 square feet

All these seats will be on the level of the main floor. On all sides of them pacity he is absolutely at the bottom of will rise the tiers of seats for the public. the scale. The band will be warranted to play "Hail to the Chief" or "The Star Spangled Banner" on the slightest provocation.

Arrangements For Transmitting the News.

The telegraph arrangements will be like those of the convention at Minneapolis four years ago, and those were about as unsatisfactory as they could be. The managers of the Exposition building could have put the operators into the basement directly beneath the press seats, and the telegrams could have been dropped to them through tubes. But the operators at the auditorium will be cooped up in the space behind the press seats under the tiers of seats on the north side which was compromised for a large sum of the hall reserved for ticket holders. How to Reach the Hall.

The site of the temporary hall-it is called commonly the Convention auditorium-is on Clark avenue, between Twelfth and Thirtcenth streets. Any one not familiar with the arrangements of the St. Louis streets will find it easy to locate the chief hotels in their relation to the auditorium. The new Union station is at Eighteenth and Market streets, just five blocks west and one block north of the auditorium. The Exposition building is at Olive and Thirteenth streets, just four blocks north. The Southern hotel is at Broadway and Walnut street, seven blocks east. The ed to carry messages from the press seats to the telegraph room, but most of the messages will go by messenger and will suffer a slight delay. Unfortunately the auditorium will have no basement.

The committee rooms will be under the tiers of seats at the east and west ends of the hall.

It is unfortunate for the St. Louis people that they missed the Democratic convention by one vote. It would have cost no more to provide a building for two conventions than for one. But luckily the Populists are coming here, and no doubt there will be other gatherings during the summer. If there is a bolt of the silver men from either convention. their natural meeting place will be here. So after all the auditorium may prove a profitable investment.

QUEER MARRIAGE CODE.

Peculiar Sex Laws of the Native Australians.

COMPLICATED AND CURIOUS.

They Are Divided Into Four Castes and Approach Wedlock Through a Most Exacting Social Formula-Astonishing Things In Their Life and Usages.

[Copyright, 1896, by John Clark Ridpath.] VII.

The lowest races of barbarians make the greatest ado over the laws of marriage. In primeval savagery we do not doubt that miscellany was the rule of the sexual union, but as soon as a savage race emerges into the conscious state and begins to organize, the most elabo-Tate antecedent conditions of marriage are prepared. The mere ceremony of taking a wife continues as simple and as brutal as before, but a vast preliminary social formality is produced, which possesses for thoughtful persons a profound interest.

The strange thing is that from the lowest form of life among barbarians, through all the ascending grades of social development to the highest stages of enlightenment, the antecedent regulations with respect to marriage become more and more simple as society progresses, until in the very highest forms of life marriage becomes a civil contract between the parties. All the way up from the bushmen to the Parisians the law holds good. The lower the race, the more elaborate are the preliminary conditions of the sexual union; the higher the social evolution, the simpler and easier is the law of marriage.

On the other hand, the ceremony of taking the wife becomes ever more formal and spectacular. The ceremony begins among the lowest savages with the simple act of carrying off the bride by force. To this is added in many cases the brutality of striking ber unconscious before she is borne away on the shoulders of the husband to his own cave or tent. From this the ceremony rises to purchase; from purchase, to the agreement of the parents; from this, by complicated stages, to the joint agreement of the parents and the parties, and from this finally to the agreement of the parties only. In the highest stages of society the principle of purchase seems to reappear. Thus, while the ceremony of marriage becomes more and more formal and ornate, the antecedent social law of the marriage becomes less and less severe, until the man and the woman, in the very highest estate, virtually make the law for themselves by reducing marriage to a civil contract of the par-

The native Australians furnish the best example of the extremely complex laws of barbarian marriage. The Australian may be regarded as the lowest form of existing man life on the earth. In a few particulars he is superior to the bushman. In all particulars he is Hottentot In brain ca inferior to the careful examination that the cranial mass of the Australians is much below rica. The brain of the negroes exceeds about 84 cubic centimeters, or 6.6 per There will be six flights of stairs 11 cent of the whole. We should hardly duce the most elaborate marriage law in the world, but such is the fact. The tive Australian may become a married man are so complicated and curious that they might well be made the foundation of a treatise in social science.

The natives of Australia are now only a handful. They cower away on the horizon and refuse to be known by their destroyers, but their characteristics have been investigated sufficiently to show us a number of astonishing things in their life and usages. The natives are polygamists, to begin with, a fact that seems to contradict the theory that polyandry is the original marriage law of barbarians.

The Australian may take as many wives as he can, but he has to approach marriage through a social formula most exacting. The savages are divided into four castes or orders, and these are observed with as much strictness as are those of India, but not in the same manner. The castes are not to be regarded as grades the one above the other, but rather as a social cycle having its foundation in sex. There are really eight divisions, four male and four female. The four male and the four female groups are set over against each other in a manner most peculiar and complicated. Every child, whether a boy or a girl, is born into one of the caste divisions, and takes the name of that division and carries it through life.

If we begin on the male side, the upper caste is called Ippai. The second division is named Murri, the third Kubbi and the fourth Kumbo. On the female side the highest caste is called Ippata, the second Mata, the third Kapota and the fourth Buta. Under special circum stances some of the castes are designated by other names-as, for instance, the caste Murri may be called Baia, for the reason that the word murri differently accented is the general term for black man or Australian.

Consider then these low savages arranged in the two columns, male and female. Each column is divided into four groups, as just described. The male Ippai caste stands over against the female group called Ippata. The Murri caste is opposite the female Mata rank. The Kubbi males stand facing, as it were, the Kapota women, and the Kumbo men are opposite to the Buta women. When marriage is to be undertaken, the code comes in with great exactness to define in what manner the marriage may be contracted. The Ippai men and the Ippata women are of the same rank, but may not intermarry. The same is true of the Murri men and the Mata women; of the Kubbi men and the Kapota women; of the Kumbo men and the Buta women.

Nor is the reason for the interdict in these cases far to seek. If the brothers in a given family are Ippai, the daughters of that family are Ippata, and are therefore in the correlated group. If the Ippai man should choose his wife from the Ippata group of women, he might Lose his sister! And the like is true of all the other castes occupying the same level. That is, if the male caste be Murri, the man of that caste must not choose a Mata woman, for she might have the same father and mother as himself. The Kubbi man must not marry a Kapota woman for the same reason, and the Kumbo man must not choose from the female caste of Buta. It happens for this reason that the two upper castes, the Ippai men and Ippata women, are incompatible, and for the same reason the Murri men and the Marta women; the Kubbi men and the Kapota women, and the Kumbo men and the Buta women-are interdicted.

The general law requires that the man of the Ippai must marry a Kapota girl, that caste being the third grade from his own. There is a limited exception to this rule permitting an Ippai man to marry an Ippata woman, provided care be taken that she be not akin to him. Otherwise every Ippai must avoid his own correlated group, pass by the Mata group of women and take a wife from the Kapota group.

In the second place, the law requires that the Murri man must take a Buta woman. He is interdicted from the Mata women, who are nearest to him, and must pass by the Kapota group and go to the second class from his own before he can take. The man of the Kubbi must marry an Ippata woman. This is also a third caste remove, but, oddly enough, in the inverse direction. The inferior Kubbi reaches up two stages and takes a superior Ippata. The law for the Kumbo is that he may marry only a Mata woman, and this again is a third remove upward.

This strange and elaborate system is carried into the offspring of the Austrahan marriages. The results are very complex, but at the same time systematic. The thing that seems to be aimed at by the barbarians is to secure diversity in the marriage, with a view to securing diversity also in the offspring. The evolution is kept up to the remotest result. The law is that the children of the cross caste marriages (and all of the marringes are of this kind) shall not be of the same caste with either of the parents. The offspring of the marriage stands off from the caste of both the father and the mother.

When an Ippai man marries a Kapota woman, the children are, if male, Murri, and if female, Mata-that is, the male children are one caste lower than the father, and the female children one caste higher than the mother. When the man of the Ippai marries, as he may marry, an Ippata woman, the offspring will be Kumbo if male and Buta if female-that is, the children, both male and female, are in this exceptional instance thrown into castes as iar as pos sible from that of the parents. The privilege of the Ippai man to marry into the social caste on a level with his own is, as it were, avenged or punished by banishing his children to the remotest extremes of society.

If the Murri man marry a Buta woman (as he must), the male children are Ippai, or one grade higher than the father, and the female children are Ippata, or three grades higher than the mother. The children of the Kubbi man and the Ippata woman are, if male, Kumbo, and if female, Buta-that is, the male children are one degree lower than the father and the female children are three degrees lower than the woman.

The children of the Kumbo man and the Mata woman are, if male, Kubbi, and if female, Kapota-that is, the male children are one degree higher than the father and the female children one degree tower than the mother.

This is without doubt the most remarkable system of marriage and descent ever invented by man. It is the most scientific. That it should be the work of the most utterly savage people on the face of the earth seems incredible. How it was devised and what were the instincts that led to the adoption of such rules of sex relation are questions beyond the ken of history and almost out of reach of speculation. A few principles, however, may be noted.

In these usages the existence of a strong desire or instinct among savages for cross breeding and constant differentiation is manifested. There is also a hint in it at the preservation of tribal solidarity. Caste exists within the tribe. The general result of the method of sexual union here described is to distribute the blood of the tribe as if the tribe were an entity or a single person. In a short time the whole tribe, under the action of these rules, becomes abso-Intely unified.

Thus, for example, the male child born Ippai has for its father a Murri Ask for Carter's, man and for its mother a Buta woman. but the Murri father had for his parents, Insist and demand an Ippai father and a Kapota mother. There is thus combined in every grand. child the lines of a four caste ancestry. The principle extended soon embraces all the tribe in its ramifications. It is literally true that every Australian child has in its veins the blood of the whole tribe, if not of the whole race. It is worth the study of a philosopher to analyze such a system, to discover its origin in savage instincts, and to trace out its results on the barbarians who invented JOHN CLARK RIDPATH.

Cæsar's Invasion as Viewed by the Humorist.

INDUCED BY A BILIOUS ATTACK.

The Author Avoids Overpraise and Mawkish Sentiment—Early Britons Only Fit to Act as Ancestors-Ignoble Amusements of the Barefooted Nobility.

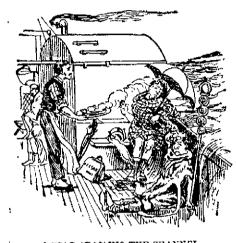

[Copyright, 1896, by J. B. Lippincott Company.] CHAPTER L

From the glad whinny of the first unicorn down to the tip end of the nineteenth century the history of Great Britain has been dear to her descendants in every land, 'neath every sky.

But to write a truthful and honest history of any country the historian should, that he may avoid overpraise and silly and mawkish sentiment, reside in a foreign country or be so situated that he may put on a false mustache and get away as soon as the advance copies have been sent to the printers.

The writer of these pages, though of British descent, will in what he may say guard carefully against permitting that fact to swerve him for one swift moment from the right.

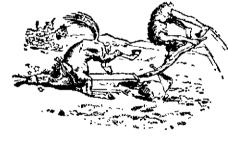

England even before Christ, as now, was a sort of money center, and thither

CÆSAR CROSSING THE CHANNEL. came the Phonicians and the Carthaginians for their tin.

These early Britons were suitable only to act as ancestors. Aside from that they had no good points. They dwelt in mud huts thatched with straw. They had no currency and no ventilation—no drafts, in other words. Their boats were made of wickerwork plastered with clay. Their swords were made of tin alloyed with copper, and had to fall back and straighten its constituted one of the most reliable chaperon. boons peculiar to that strange people. Cæsar first came to Great Britain on account of a bilious attack. On the way across the channel a violent storm came up. The great emperor and pantata believed he was drowning, so that in an instant's time everything throughout his whole lifetime recurred to him as he went down—especially his breakfast.

Purchasing a four-in-hand of docked Innicorns and much improved in health, he returned to Rome.

Agriculture had a pretty hard start among these people, and where now the glorious fields of splendid pale and billowy oatmeal may be seen, interspersed with every kind of domestic and imported fertilizer in cunning little hillocks just bursting forth into fragrance by the roadside, then the vast island was a quaking swamp or covered by impervious forests of gigantic trees, up which with coarse and shameless glee would scamper the nobility.

(Excuse the rhythm into which I may now and then drop as the plot develops. -Author).

Cæsar later on made more invasions, one of them for the purpose of returning his team and flogging a Druid with whom he had disagreed religiously on a former trip. (He had also bought his team of the Druid).

The Druids were the sheriffs, priests, judges, chiefs of police, plumbers and justices of the peace. They practically ran the place, and no one could be a Druid who could not pass a civil service examination.

They believed in human sacrifice, and often of a bright spring morning could have been seen going out behind the bush to sacrifice some one who disagreed with them on some religious point or other.

The Druids largely lived in the woods in summer and in debt during the winter. They worshiped almost everything that had been left out overnight, and Along about the beginning of the Christian "Eric," says an elderly Englishman, the Queen Boadicea got so disgusted with the Romans, who carried on there in England just as they had been in the habit of doing at home-cutting after a brief skirmish the entire army up like a Halloween party in its junior year—that she got her Britons together, had a steel dress made to fight in comfortably and not tight under the arms. Then she said, "Is there any one here who hath a culverin with him?" One was soon found and fired. This by the Romans was regarded as an opening of hostilities. Land and a Living

Are best and cheapest in the Great New South. The northern farmer, artisan, merchant, manufacturer, are all hurrying into this rapidly developing country aspioneers. The open climate, the low price of land, and its steady increase in value; the positive assurance of crops, with but little effort to raise them, all combine to turn all eyes southward.

To assist in this movement, low railroad rates have been inaugurated over The Queen & Crescent Route from northern towns and villages, both round trip and one-way tickets being on sale at about half the usual rates. Round-trips selling on April 7th, 21st, and May 5th; one-way tickets on the first Tuesday each month.

Now is the time for you to go and see. Much has been said and written about the fruit, grains and grasses along The Queen & Crescent Route and about its climate—no blizzards and no sunstrokes. Summer nights are cool. Grass grows green ten months in the year. Less wear and tear in living than you've known in the north. A million acres of land at $3 to $5 an acre, on easy terms. There will be no more days of grace in Ohio after September 1st. There never was much sense in the three days which everybody counted on anyway, and the change will be welcome.

Thanks to the the courtesy of the Canton Repository, THE INDEPENDENT has which indicates its contents. Unlike most similar enterprises, it has been compiled by Mr. A. C. Tonner for the board of enforcment of law because it is law, trade, without attempt at profit. Fa- is utterly neglectedmiliar as THE INDEPENDENT is with the various buildings and institutions of the county seat, it has found a great deal; between the covers of "Illustrated Industrial Canton" that is new and instructive. The book is a characteristic manifestation of public spirit on the part of our wide awake and progressive Cleveland, H. C. Haydn, chairman, and Clara Barton has already expended $50,-000 in Armenia, with "wisdom, economy and fidelity." The greatest obstacle to relief work now is the lack of funds. The region given over to murder and robbery is 500 miles long and 300 miles wide, including hundreds of cities and villages. At least 40,000, the male bread winners, have been already killed; 300,-000, mostly widows and orphans, are dying of starvation, exposure and sickness; 47,600 houses and shops have been plundered and many of them burned.

General Coxey is trying to convert the mighty West, and is having a hard time of it. Very recently the great voice of Oregon was heard crying out to Coxey to come and be heard, and Coxey hearkened to the cry and agreed to go. Then Chairman Young of the People's party committee heard of the prospective visitation and wrote him a letter urging him to remain at home. But Coxey, any own Covey felt the pricking of conscience that told him of those Western people, enslaved by plutocracy and in danger of leaving that evil only to fall into the sea of silver, an : replied that he would go to Oregon whether or no, so now there is going to be a merry time of it. but THE INDEPENDENT ventures to predict that, come what will, Coxey will make that speech.

Somebody has asked THE INDEPEND ENT to accertain the number of copies sold of "Coin's Financial School," a work by W. H. Harvey that attracted great attention during the free silver oraze. The seeker after information being convinced that the pro-silver sentiment was dying ont, desired also to know how many of these books had been issued since the last general election. THE INDEPENDENT addressed an inquiry to Mr. Harvey, who kindly answers as follows:

CHICAGO, Ill., April 18. Replying to yours of the 14th inst., the 'Coin's Financial School" to the present time has been a little in excess of 500,000. Of "Coin's Financial School Up to Date," about 200 000; "A Tale of Two Nations," 200,000. Of the 900,000 books above referred to, about 50,000 have been sold since the election last fall. Sincerely, W. H. HARVEY.

Mr. Warren K. Moorehead, of the State Museum, Ohio State University, writes to The Independent saying: "We have lately established a museum here in Columbus for the purpose of preserving the antiquities of the state. We have met with considerable success in our work, and now have a collection of some 40,000 specimens. About six weeks ago we were disturbed by learning that one Chadwick, whose address we were unable to ascertain, and who has evaded ns, has been traveling over the state representing to farmers and to the collectors of ancient relics, that he is authorized by the state of Ohio to solicit specimens for the museum. He is not authorized by any of the state officials, and is not only a fraud and a humbug, but such specimens as he secures are shipped east and sold."

Probate Judge Wise and Coroner Mc Quate were nominated on Saturday without opposition, and their election will not be seriously contested. They have both served one term in their respective offices with entire acceptability. It is creditable to the county that a man of such high personal worth, immovable official integrity aand plain common sense as Judge Wise can be secured and retained for this responsible position. Judge Wise stands alone between our county and the naturalization of many education and should so remain. It is cold?

to be hoped that he will guard the approaches to citizenship with even more zealous care in the future than in the past. Dr. McQuate has proven an energetic, accommodating and efficient coroner, who ventures to have a mind of A Blockade of the C., L. & W. his own and to use it.

Taken in connection with the fact that for years our saloonkeepers have sold liquor on Sunday or have not, as their pleasure might dictate, the arrest of E. L. Hering and his sentence to spend 10 days in jail is surprising. The spirit of obedience to law, however late, is always welcome, but it is difficult to attribute so sudden an accession of virtue to any such high motive. It would be ridiculous to assume that nobody but Mr. E. L. Hering sold liquor in Massillon on Sunday. The authorities have winked at the sale of liquor on the first day of the week, and no earnest attempt has been made to stop it. The liquor laws have been used as tools to trifle with Empty threats of enforcement have satisfied one party without deceiving the other, and therefore, been favored with a copy of "Illustrated under this vicious system of quasi-pro-Industrial Canton," a work the title of a tection, the persecution of one man, no worse than the others, is made possible, while the great underlying principle of

TEN DAYS IN JAIL WATCHES

Unpleasant Predicament of E. L. Hering.

FOR KEEPING OPEN ON SUNDAY.

Alleged Determination of a Creditor to Get Even is Followed by His Arrest-He Pleads Guilty and Gets a Jail Sen-

Ex-Councilman Edward L. Hering, who, since the sale of his livery stable some weeks ago, has conducted a saloon at 122 West Tremont street, appeared before Justice H. B. Sibila Monday morning, and, after pleading guilty to a charge of keeping his place of business open on Sunday, was fined twenty five dollars and costs and sentenced to ten days in the county jail. The affidavit was filed by Mrs. Carrie Dunlap, of 119 West Tremont street. The charge was brought under the state law, the maximum penalty being $100 fine and thirty days' confinement, and the minimum $25 fine and ten days' confinement. Under this law an offense is constituted not President Huber Names the necessarily by the sale of liquor, but by merely keeping the door of the saloon

Mrs. Dunlap who, it is said, had consulted a lawyer, was well aware of this fact, and on Sunday she boldly entered Mr. Hering's saloon and placing a large pitcher on the counter asked for 10 cents worth of beer. Mr. Hering refused to fill the pitcher, stating that it was not his custom to sell drinks on Sunday. Mrs. Dunlap picked up the vessel and started for the door at the same time saying, "I don't care, I have seen enough." The next Mr. Hering heard of the matter was when the constable served the papers Mr. Hering says that the charge was brought out of pure spite.

"I am willing to admis," said he, 'that I violated the law, but in these days of panics and exorbitant Dow taxes we saloon keepers must do something to keep our heads above water.

"The beginning of this metter dates back several years when I was in the grocery business. The vote was 49 to 32. Dr. Brown's son attempted to assault Dr. McLean, who had voted against his father, but was prevented. Dr. Brown says he has no plans for the future, that he is too old to choose any other calling, and cannot do more than he has done to prove his innocence. The champion Baltimores are probably the worst sufferers, because they are compelled to begin without the services of their great thin baseman, Mugsy McGraw. The absence . . . uch a player from any nine is a greate loss than the public generally real-McGraw's fever will probably leave him t o weak to play his game for several months after he gets out of doors.

That reminds me that McGraw is in some respects a veritable Dr. Jokyll and Mr. Hyde. The McGraw in everyday life is Dr. Jekyll and the McGraw of the diamond is the Mr. Hyde. Off the field he is as agreeable, courteous, pleasant and intelligent a young gentleman as one may meet. It is only while he is engaged in a game of ball that he sometimes becomes metamorphosed into almost an irresponsible person. John McGraw is one of the few professionals who play ball with their whole pervous system. The result has been disastrous to the great liftle third base man. He is a victim of nervous prostration. The strain of two championship seasons has shattered his nerves. That is the secret of his ill health. The excitement of his profession has broken him down, and those who profess to know say he will never stand the strain again for any con-

A man like McGraw, thus surrounded, cannot with Jay Gould in the ownership of the maintain placidity of temper. Now that horse which was named in honor of the Doyle has joined the Baltimore fighters he more than makes up for McGraw's absence from the team, as the Orioles' recent experience in Petersburg proves. his umpires does not differ much from that of other years. It is good advice, but I doubt whether it will turn one of the staff from his mind as made up before he received Nick's instructions. The older members of the staff, Emslie, Hurst, Lynch and Keefe, will go about their business, I think, much after their old practice, and the power of removal will not be arbitrarily exercised.

It was certainly a great surprise to hear that William Sunday, Anson's old outfielder, and more recently a volunteer evangelist, had applied to Mr. Young for an appointment as a National league umpire. Mr. Sunday quit ball playing some years ago because, as he announced, his conscience urged him to leave such a frivolous calling and turn his efforts toward horseback riding. the saving of souls. Now what has called him from the evangelical field back to baseball, and of Hamilton a mile unpaced, but that he all things to umpiring, a vocation which develops more sinfulness on earth than any other? Possibly the Rev. Mr. Sunday believes he can, by his kind words, Christian fortitude and forbearance, do what brute force, physical endurance and expletive language cannot. We hear considerable just now about the new style of "hit and run" playing. Baltimore has the credit of following the system, but the Bostons really are the pioneers who brought it out several years ago. It will be remembered that the public marveled over the fact that the Bean Eaters could make more runs with fewer hits than any other team playing ball and we heard a great deal about "Boston luck." It was not luck, but this system of "hit and run."

The Baltimores took it up in 1894, and last year. This year Irwin has drilled his Giants into the same kind of work, and other teams will have to adopt it.

The plan is simple. Whenever a runner reaches first the next batsman must work with him. The runser signals to the batsman on what ball he will start for second. Until that ball is pitched the batsman will make no attempt to hit, though he be tempted by one exactly where he likes it. On the contrary, when the ball is pitched, on which the runner agrees to start, the batsman is bound to hit no matter how wide, close, low or high it be.

This concerted action between runner and batsman throws the opposing infield out of gear and no double play is possible, Brilliant Opening of the League are worked around, one at a time, with such regularity that victory comes oftener than defeat. To play this game the nine must be fast on their feet. Slow, heavy men, like Brouthers, Thompson and Anson, are of little good, because they would invariably sacrifice themselves at bat, whereas sprinters, like Duffy, McCarthy, Keeler, Gleason, Tiernan or Dowd, will beat the ball to first half the time on account of the worry which the play gives to infielders. That is why more runs, for the amount of base hits, are made in such games than are made in an every one for unless it be on a short fly ball. Runners Diedrich Discusses a Style Based on the Principle of Finesse.

A CLEVER BUT HAZARDOUS LEAD.

Through Strong Up to Weak-Playing For Position and the Dangers Attending It How Two Daring Methods of Play May Protect Each Other.

Within the broad meaning of the term "finesse," that style of the game which Among the probable young stars of the may be termed "playing for position" National league who will take permanent may be very properly included. It is based on the same principle which underlies the simple finesse by one player in order to catch a high card which probably lies to the right of the one finessing. It is really finesse by two players instead of one. Thus if S., holding queen, jack and others, leads the queen, through the king held by W., N. having ace, the effect is just the same as though N. held both ace and queen.

The same principle lies back of all so natural ball player. His rise to the top is called "strengthening" leads. If a ten spot similar to Dahlen's entry into the major, is lead by S. in this game under average conditions, N. may decline to take a cer tain trick and reserve his high cards, risking a finesse, which, even if successful, reduces the forces of the opponents at little expense to his own side. However such leads are hardly justifiable except upon the indication that, of the opponents, second hand is stronger in the suit and when the lead of your own long suit or the return of your partner's lead is inadvisable.

Great care should be taken in this estimation of the relative strength of the hands of your opponents. If fourth hand is a deep finesser, he may have given false evidence by his previous play of the state of his hand and be able to capture by his reserved force the cards played by your pariner. For example, in a previous round, on the lead of a jack heading four others by W. N. playing low from queen, and E., with king in hand refusing to play it, if S., after taking the trick, supposes E. to be weak

If, however, E, had played the king and thereby disclosed the resultant weakness | per the name, Doan's, and take on ther. of his hand, the lead of low through W., would, if S. had enough of the suit remaining to fight it out afterward with W., be quite advantageous.

With opponents who finesse very little or never at all and with a partner who is given to reserving his forces and trusting to you, the lead through strength is not only very safe, but often a great trick wipner. It might be urged that declared weakness in your right hand opponent might be taken as an indication that trumps could be expected from him on the next round, but, with no indication of a signal from the others, the drawing of a trump from him at little expense to your side is of no great moment.

The great merit of this style of play is that it compels the man desirous of establishing his suit to play his high cards at a disadvantage, not knowing whether the commanding card lies with the first or third hand. The best method for him to Entertainment committees will find adopt is to play the highest in his hand. If he takes the trick, he must lead a card which your partner may take and which you, holding the master card, are certain, barring trumps, to capture, or he must turn to another unknown suit and give you, at fourth hand, a decided advantage in position.

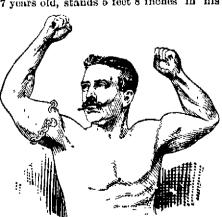

How strong this may be can be seen when it is taken into consideration that you can again lead through strength, at | the expense of a trump from an opponent, who by this time may be wildly signaling. Of course in this game the commanding card of your left hand opponent's declared suit should never be led by you. You would be then doing that which your opponent is most desirous you should do.

A good rule to follow in this case is the reverse of the golden one. It is, "Whatever you see your enemy doesn't like to do, make him do it " When you know that from the fall of the cards on the previous round, if he could regain the lead, he would not continue the suit, at least with the lead of a high card, then, by your play of that suit, put him in a dilemma about playing that high card. There is a great deal of need for good judgment in adopting this style of play. DIEDRICH. Knickerbocker Whist Club, New York.

SAMPSON DEFIES SANDOW.

He Has Developed More Muscle and Wants to Meet His Old Antagonist.

C. A. Sampson, the professional strong man, who recently performed a wonderful chain breaking feat, now offers $20,000 to the man who will duplicate such performances as he may accomplish. He challenges competition "from any man in the world, Sandow preferred." This would seem to powers, or, at least, thinks he has, for in ! past contests with Sandow he has not achieved anything calculated to make him vain. However that may be, he is a very strong man, and his prowess in his peculiar line is beyond question. Sampson is now 37 years old, stands 5 feet 8 inches in his socks and weighs 175 pounds. His chest measurement is 38 inches, biceps muscle 19 inches and forearm 12 inches.

In the performance of his recent feat Sampson was, in an athletic sense, simply magnificent. Taking two chains, the tensile strength of which was said to have been 10,000 pounds, he slipped them over his arm and pulled them up over and around the biceps muscles, which they tightly encircled. Clinching his fists, he slowly raised them toward the shoulder. The muscle swelled more and more till it seemed that the chains would be imbedded in the tissue. Suddenly both chains broke and fell to the ground. Examina tion of the broken chains showed that the exhibition was in every way gennine.

It is said that these chains were much larger and stronger than any used in the

Why Our Cheese Export Trade Is Wrecked.

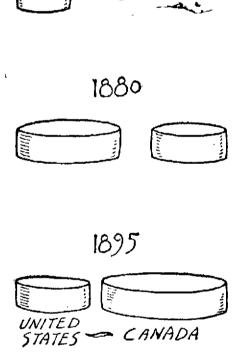

AND CANADA HAS CUT US OUT.

So Called "Filled" Cheese Is the Cause of It-A Suicidal Frand and an Outrage on Honest Producers-Some Startling Fig-

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Once more the American farmer. The public may think it has heard enough about his troubles, and many congressmen have taken up the tone of stigmatizing those who portray said troubles as "calamity howlers," but the farmer is before the committees again on some comparatively new issues, and I am glad to add that they are very practical. They are introduced, however, with a summary of woes the mere examination of wihch has depressed me so that I feel as if this letter should be printed in blue ink and read with smoked spectacles. Out of the mass two facts stand established and important — the first that American farmers are now unanimous in the conclusion that wheat as a money maker is done for and cotton little better, and that for many years. Indeed the bucolic experts who have just testified declare that, instead of the 2,500,000,000 bushels, the largest world crop ever raised, which averaged the producers 60 cents at ports of shipment, within seven years probably, and ten certainly, the world will produce 5,000,000,000 bushels a year, which will average between 40 and 50 cents at the points of export shipment. I hate like sin to believe it, but their arguments are unanswerable.

The second fact is that all the associations which can be said to represent farmers are unanimous in urging that all products must be turned at least once before leaving the country—that is, instead of exporting corn, wheat, hav, oats and so forth we must sell butter, cheese, meat and blooded horses. And here is where the prompt action of government is evoked, for it so happens becomes imperative every country we it a poor customer or engaged in a mean oleomargarine and several for this and sneaking fight against our products. specimen because the fight on it is hot imitation butters and cheeses, among ▲ COMPARISON OF CHEESE EXPORTS. F. Wilber of the Twenty-first New York is the active man of the committee on this subject I sought his help to begin with. Mr. Wilber ought to know a good deal about cheese, as he was reared in the center of cheesedom, worked at the business for years and is one of the great milk cattle breeders of the coun-

How the Trade Was Ruined. "It is pretty much our own fault," said Mr. Wilber, "for we have allowed these fellows to make a counterfeit to the counterfeits. run honest cheese out of the market, and if you fancy this is a small thing, or that I am engaged in a petty business, just look at these figures. Here the New York city Produce Exchange shows that in 1879 there were exported from that city to England 2,775,800 boxes of cheese, valued at over $16,-500,000, while it has of late years run down so rapidly that this year the exports cannot possibly exceed 600,000 boxes, valued at $3,000,000, which is a decline of $13,000,000 in the years when the increase should have been very much greater than that. Now look at these late figures from Canada, which show that the shipments from Montreal in 1879 were 525,000 boxes, and last year they were 2,148,854 boxes, worth $13,000,000, every pound of it to England and a conclusive proof that they have gained nearly all that we have lost. And, furthermore, I know that at least 10,000,000 pounds of good New York cream cheese have been taken to Montreal, reboxed and branded as Canadian cheese to be sold to England. You know how easily the English can be prejudiced against our products, and the shipment of a few cargoes of this filled cheese has ruined a trade 10 or 20 times as great. It is suicidal. It is a fraud on customers and an outrage on honest producers.

"Unquestionably. In the first place, you know that skimmilk of the ordinary kind is far inferior in the matter of health to pure milk, but the new system employed at the great Elgin creameries—and it is in northern Illinois that nearly all this filled cheese is made takes every particle of natural oil out of the milk, leaving nothing but casein.

"But is filled cheese unwholesome?"

could tell what it was unless it was very skillfully colored, but this completely emasculated milk, to borrow a word, is too thin to make anything, and so they add pork fat, 30 pounds to 100 of the milk. Sometimes they add cottonseed oil and have used other things and sometimes add miscellaneous stuff they call 'neutrals,' but generally it is pork fat. Now, they cannot heat it above 140 degrees because it would not mix, and that leaves in all these bacteria or trichinse or what not, which are supposed to be killed by a thorough cooking. And who knows what kind of fat it is? And it is right in the loin fat that the trichinæ are at their best. Why, Mr. Sands, who is the largest manufacturer of this coun- sleeves continues-for it is really an acterfeit cheese, declared that he could not take pork into his stomach in any form whatever without suffering great distress. Yet he imposes this enormous proportion of it on the ignorant, who think they are buying dairy products. Now, isn't that a nice trick to play on an orthodox Jew? And the Jews like cheese and are in the habit of using a great deal of it, but they won't eat so much hereafter, I think. In fact, we have learned lately that hundreds of boxes are being shipped back to the wholesalers especially from the south.

Adulterated Compounds.

"Now, I have some feeling on this matter because I have long known that it was a great injury to my constituents, and as soon as elected I went to work on it to perfect a bill which should cover every point. Representative Cook of Wisconsin, which state is next to New York in producing good cheese and has the same stringent laws against filled cheese, brought in a bill. He made an honest effort to meet the case, and his bill was good so far as it went, but all the cheese men declared that it was somewhat defective in the matter of complished thing that they are smaller—it definition. I went over every point care- will make a perceptible difference in the fully with practical men, and my bill amount of dress goods it is necessary to has been indersed by all the dairymen and by every witness before the committee except one, and he a man who holds patents for the making of filled cheese. And after all this the committee now proposes to set my bill aside for a substitute which is in the nature of a revenne measure, a sort of weak disguise."

At this point Mr. Wilber became a trifle emphatic, but added nothing as that just as this change of export staples to the facts. I find, to my amazement, that there are recorded in the patent ofship to is either in trouble which makes! fice no less than 79 patents for making filled cheese, but owing to the com-And it is astonishing how much harm bine I cannot determine the number. they have done us, aided not a little by In the specifications over 50 substances our own foolishness. The dairy commissioner of Minnesota testified that the honest manufacture there had fillen off enormously and 19 cheese factories were discontinued last year. Wisconsin reports that 54,000,000 pounds of cheese and 74,000,000 pounds of butter were made in that state last year, that the filled cheese makers have been driven over the line into Illinois and that so far the people have been tolerably well protected against the counterfeit. SPRING STYLES. Puffed Sleeves and Spring Jackets—The Latter Are Lined With Silk. Plain bodices are seen this spring, the trimming being flat and the bodice itself tight. In some cases a plain plastron is buttoned on in front; in others the bodice opens under the arm and whethe shoulder, while there are a few where the closing is at the back.

A new sleeve is made with four puffs, yach about four inches wide. These are pushed up together until they occupy a space of but four inches. Below this is a loose puff to the elbow, then a fitted cuff, with a puff at the wrist. The fancy for points extending over the hands is quite decided. If the modification in the size of buy for a gown.

The jacket remains the correct outside wear with tailor gowns and for young girls. It may be single or double breasted, with short or long revers, these diminishing very gradually if the jacket has an open front. The fronts may be square or round at the lower corners, and the edge may be finished with one or several rows of stitching, this being repeated on the sleeves, revers and all suitable places. Embroidery on the same material; galloon, a novel arrangement of plaiting or gathering the sleeve; little pockets, real or simulated, disposed to the best advantage, and a lining of plain or changeable silk of a light tone are some of the means used to give individuality and effect to the new jackets.

The illustration shows a striking spring costume. The godet skirt is of brown serge and is entirely plain. The bodice is of velours chinois. The full fronts open over a plastron of the same material and are connected by two straps of black satin fastened by buttons. Two similar straps adorn each shoulder. The plastron has a yoke of white satin, trimined with lace and an application of black satin. Epaulets of white satin and lace fall over the tops of the brown serge sleeves, which are finished at the wrist by plaited cuffs of velours. The belt is of black satin.

INGERSOLL AND FAITH.

The Foundations Thereof Again Discovered.

CHRIST

A Minister Who Replied to Ingersoll, Takes Up the Cudgels Against His Own Critic-He Quotes from the Classics to Support His Case.

MR. EDITOR: With your permission we would say to the critic of yesterday concerning our briefly stated opinion of Colonel Ingersoll's lecture, that we most certainly do not repudiate the Old and New Testaments when we say that Christ is the only foundation of our faith. The only foundation of our faith in THE INDEPENDENT is the editor and his associates, and the greatest reason we have for believing any item of news contained in The Independent is faith in the integrity of the men or man who is responsible for the item. There is a difference between a foundation and "the" foundation. We may speak of many things as fundamental to a christian's faith, but the foundation of them all is Christ. Christ is the foundation of the world. "He is all and in all," He existed from eternity, and, of course, antedates the Bible and man. Christians generally believe that Christ is a divine person; that he is God, the author of the Bible: that "Holy men of God wrote as tney were moved by the Holy Ghost." "All Scripture is given by inspiration of of God in the person of Christ Jesus. Bible was written and among the na-Christ is the foundation, and to those of us who have the Scriptures it is not in-Christ, but they reveal Christ the foundation. Other foundation hath no man garding the Salvation Army. laid than is laid which is Jesus Christ."

1 Cor. 3:11. The Scriptures are not the only revelation of God. They are "the faith and practice," but there are other revelations of God, among which are nature, previdence and the testimony "A measure of God's Spirit is given to every man to profit withal.' Universally men have some sense of right and wrong in motives. They are conscious of the presence of a judge who passes upon their conduct, that this judge approves some things and disapproves others. There are broad prinof legislative acts. Joseph Ager Beet has recently made statement of these facts and illustrated them by some quotations from ancient writers. The first is from Xenophon and is the history of a conversation between Socrates and Hoppias of whom he Then who do you suppose, said he, has made these laws? I think, said he, that gods gave these laws to man. For with all men it is thought right first of all to reverence gods. Is it then everywhere thought right to honor parents: It is, said he. Also that parents and children do not marry?

To me, Socrates, this does not seem to be a law of God. Why? said he. Because I see some, said he, transgressing it Yes and many other things they do against law. But then they who transgress the laws made by the gods pay a penalty which in no way man can escape; just as some who transgress laws made by men escape punishment, secretly or by violence.

Demosthenes: "And not only will these principles be found in the enactments of the law, but even nature herself has laid them down in her unwritten laws and in the moral constitutions of men.'

Cicero's work On Laws: "This, then, as it appears to me. has been the decision of the wisest philosophers,-that law was neither a thing contrived by the genius of man, nor established by any decree of the people, but a certain eternal principle, which governs the entire universe, wisely commanding what is right and forbidding what is wrong. Therefore they called that primal and supreme call the mind of God enjoining or forbidding each separate thing in accordance with reason. On which account it is that this law, which the gods have bestowed on the human race, is so justly praised. For it is the reason and mind of a wise Being equally able to urge us to good and to deter us from RELIGIOUS EDUCATION CONGRESS. Important Subjects Discussed by Prominent People In Washington.

Washington, April 22.—There were about 500 people present at the session of the first national congress of religious education. After devotional exercises, Dr. F. B. Palmer, principal state normal school at Fredona, N. Ŷ., read a BIBLE. paper on "Religious Education Defined." The most important thing he thought is to teach children the personality of God. Miss Annie T. Smith, of the bureau of education, Washington, discussed "Old Problems In New Lights." The separation of church and state, she said, has given the school the task of preparing men for this life and left to the church the task of preparing them for the life to come. Hence the anomoly of men, Christian at heart, but pagan in intellect.

Rev. Dr. Bailer, vice chancellor of the American university at Washington, read an exhaustive paper on religious education in different periods of life, and Rev. Dr. Gillman, corresponding secretary of the American Bible society, read a report of the society.

The Rev. Dr. Hume of the University of North Carolina read a paper on the family as an educational institution. Rev. Dr. Little of Washington, General John Eaton, president of the congress, and Rev. Dr. J. M. Otts, editor of the Alabama Presbyterian of Greensboro, Ala., spoke on the same theme.
